

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to means for cleaving a nucleic acid cleavage structure in a site-specific manner. Enzymes, including 5' nucleases and 3' exonucleases, are used to detect and identify nucleic acids derived from 5 microorganisms. Methods are provided which allow for the detection and identification of bacterial and viral pathogens in a sample.